Best Investment
a COW OWNER CAN MAKE

THAT'S what over two million cow owners the world over have found the De Laval Cream Separator to be.

A De Laval Separator saves butter-fat and produces cream of superior quality over any setting system or any other separator every time it is used, twice a day every day in the year.

It involves far less labor than any setting system, has greater capacity, runs easier and lasts from two to ten times longer than any other separator.

Even if you have only two or three cows, if you are selling cream or making butter, a De Laval Cream Separator is the most profitable investment you can make.

If you are using any other cream separator it will certainly pay you to try a De Laval alongside your present machine and see how much cleaner you can skim with a De Laval, and also how much easier it is to run and keep clean and sanitary.

When you consider that a De Laval Separator usually saves its cost the first year and frequently in a few months, and then goes right on doing so for from ten to twenty years, and it is further understood that the De Laval may be purchased on such terms, that it will actually pay for itself while you are using it, it can easily be seen that there is no excuse for any one putting off the purchase of this great cream-saving machine.

Carmen's Messenger

—BY— HAROLD BINDLOSS

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne, and Toronto

It looked somewhat bulkier and he examined it carefully, but the cover did not seem to have been removed. It could not have been replaced by another, because the original address was there and he knew Carmen's hand; then there was a seal, which he did not think could have been tampered with. Besides, the man had only had it for a minute or two, and he had not time to remove it. It would probably have taken something out instead of putting something in. Foster decided that he was mistaken about its size and returned it to the post.

Then he wanted a cigarette and took out the case he had got in the fur coat. Since he had left the coat in Montreal, the case was the only record of his adventure on the train and he wondered whether he would ever be able to restore it to its owner and speculated languidly about the man. As the latter knew his name, it was strange that he had not communicated with him at the Windsor, as he had promised. He had obviously not been attacked, because there had been nothing about it in the Canadian newspapers. The thing was puzzling, but after all it did not concern Foster much and he thought about something else.

It was late when he arrived at Newcastle and went to a hotel. There was fog and rain next morning, and he saw very little of the town, which seemed filled with smoke. Taking a tram car that carried him past rows of dingy buildings and shops, where the lights twinkled, he got out at the corner of a narrow street that ran back into the haze. After looking at the address on the packet he plunged into the gloom beside a row of tall, sooty buildings. There was no pavement and here and there a cart stood beneath an opening in the wall. The buildings were apparently warehouses, but some of the doors had brass plates and lights shone in the upper windows. By and by he found the number he wanted and entered a dirty arch, inside which a name was painted on the wall. Graham's was not there, but he went up the steps to inquire at the first office he reached.

The lower stories were used as a warehouse and he came to the top landing before he saw a name that seemed to be Danish or Scandinavian painted on a door and going in knocked on the counter. The office was small and shabby and smelt of bacon, which he thought indicated that its occupant dealt in provisions, but he could not see much because of a glass partition. When he was getting impatient, an old man came to the counter.

"Can you tell me if there's a Mr. Graham in this building?" Foster asked.

"Yes, he's here," said the other. "What do you want?"

Foster said he had brought a packet from Canada and the old man, who looked rather hard at him, lifted a flap in the counter and told him to pass through. A door in the partition opened as he advanced and Foster man beckoned him to come in. It looked as if the latter had heard what had passed, but this saved an explanation and Foster, who asked if he was Graham, put the packet on a table. There was not much else in the small, empty room, except a cupboard filled with pigeon holes and a safe.

This is from Miss Austin of Gardner's Crossing," he said.

Graham glanced at the packet carefully, as if he did not consider it of much importance, and Foster felt puzzled. The fellow was not as old as Carmen's father, but Foster thought there was nothing about him that would attract a girl used to admiration, as Carmen's father was. He was certainly not handsome and had, on the whole, a commonplace look, while he was obviously in a small way of business.

"Thank you," he said. "It seems you have been to Edinburgh. He had a branch there, but closed it recently. Newcastle has more facilities for exporting our goods. I am afraid you have been put to some trouble."

Foster replied that he did not mind this, since he had promised Miss Austin to bring the packet and she was a friend of his. He thought he studied the man's face, saw nothing to indicate that he was interested. "Are you staying here?" he asked, and when Foster told him that he was going back as soon as he could, resumed: "If you have been staying, I would have been glad to take you about the town; but after all, there's nothing much in the way of amusement going on. I might arrange to meet you in the afternoon, but must now finish some letters for the Continental mail."

Foster, who said he could not wait, went out, feeling that the other was pleased to get rid of him. Graham was obviously a small importer of provisions, and could not see the girl in Edinburgh, how warned him to post the packet. Carmen's reason for sending such a man something she valued was impossible to discern.

This, however, was not Foster's business and after lunch he caught a train to Hexham, and finding he could get no farther, spent the night in the old border town.

VIII.

An Offer of Help

It rained and the light was going when Foster sat in a window seat of the library at the Garth. He was alone, but did not mind this. Featherstone treated him as one of the family; he was free to do what he liked, and Alice, who had talked to him for half an hour, had just gone away. Lighting a cigarette, he mused and looked about.

Outside, the first case, black and dripping above the wet drive. Between their trunks he saw the river, stained with post, sprawling among the stones, and the streaks of foam that stretched across a coffee-colored pool. Then a few haggard faces ran back into the mist that hung about the hills. A red fire threw a soft glow about the library. The room was somewhat shabby but spacious. Rows of old books in stained bindings, which Foster thought nobody read, faded into the gloom at its other end. It was warm and quiet, and he found it a comfortable retreat.

He had now been at the Garth a fortnight and did not want to leave. Featherstone and his wife obviously wished him to stay; he was grateful for the welcome. He had given him, and felt as if he belonged to the place. What Alice thought was not clear, but she treated him with a quiet friendliness that he found singularly pleasant. By and by he began to wonder why his comrades had not written, particularly as he had brought away a bag of Lawrence's. He had one like it, and as both had his owner's initials stamped outside, he imagined the baggage agent had been deceived by the F when he altered the check. Lawrence's bag, however, had his name engraved upon the lock.

Foster sat down in a big chair by the fire, and imagined he fell asleep because it had got nearly dark without his noticing it when the opening of the door roused him. Looking up, he saw Featherstone come in with a letter in his hand. The post did not arrive until the afternoon.

Precept and Practice.

Kathleen had proved to be all that a servant should be in regard to her duties; but unfortunately her energies never seemed to extend to keeping her face clean. Her mistress desired to tell her to wash it, but not wanting to offend a valued servant, she tried to be diplomatic.

"Do you know, Kathleen," she remarked in a confidential manner, "that if you wash your face in hot soapy water it will make you beautiful!"

"Sure, an' it's a wonder yer niver tried it yerself, ma'am!" was Kathleen's surprising answer.—Vancouver Province.

Cupidity Finds a Way
She—The man I marry must have a fortune equal to mine.
He—That's easily said. Make over half of yours to me.

Undeveloped Energy

Experts say that in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta at least 6,500,000 h.p. of water runs to waste every day. 1,172,000 is on the Saskatchewan and Winnipeg rivers and their tributaries, and the balance in the great rivers of the north, the Athabasca, Peace, Churchill and the Nelson. To date there are but twelve small plants, consuming 197,000 h.p., in operation upon these rivers.

Appropriate War Names

In England the defence of the realm act is commonly called "Dora," and now, with their predilection for making words out of initials the "Wrens." As they are engaged in large numbers in the work of building airships the name is the more appropriate.—Doston Globe.

Corn as Food and Fuel

Was Greatly Valued in Stove and Fireplace

Food serves substantially the same purpose in the body as fuel in the engine. It provides the energy for work. The carbohydrates, that is the sugars, starches and celluloses, can all be used as fuels and can all be used as foods. The final products, water and carbon dioxide, are in both cases the same, and necessarily, therefore, the amount of energy produced is the same in the body as in the engine.

Corn is a good example of the equivalence of the two sources of energy. There are few better foods and no better fuels. I can remember the good old days in Kansas when we had corn to burn. It was both an economy and a luxury, for at 10 cents a bushel—it was cheaper than coal or wood and preferable to either at any price. The long yellow ears, each wrapped in its husking, could be handled without cracking the fingers. Each kernel as it cracked sent out a blazing jet of oil and the cobs left a fine bed of coals for the corn popper to be shaken over. Drift wood and the pyrotechnic fuel they make now by soaking sticks in strontium and copper salts cannot compare with the old-fashioned corn fed fire in beauty and the power of evoking visions. Doubtless such luxury would be condemned as wicked nowadays, but those who have known the caloric value of corn would find it hard to abandon it altogether, and I fancy that the western farmer's wife, when she has an extra batch of baking to do, will steal a few ears from the crib. —E. A Ford Car Takes the Place of all These Things

WHEN you own a Ford you can do away with many articles that are a source of continuous expense to the man who still drives a horse. For instance, not only your driving-horse and buggy, but the single harness, blankets, whips, currycombs, brushes, horse-shoes, pitch-forks, feed-bins, etc.

In their place you have a speedy, dependable, dignified, roomy Ford Car, complete in itself. It is vastly superior to the narrow, cramped buggy that travels so slowly. And when a Ford is standing idle it does not eat three meals a day, and it requires no "looking after."

A Ford will save you time, trouble, and money. It is the utility car for the busy farmer and his family.

Mrs. Bales and sons gave evidence as to ownership of the steer, which they missed about a month ago, and on Friday last it came home bearing her own brand also that of Llewellyn. Defendant, who pleaded guilty, said he did not see any other brand on it and branded it thinking it was one of a number he had recently purchased. After hearing the evidence for and against, the Justices found Llewellyn guilty, and fined him $200 and costs, amounting in all to $205.50.

Standard Drilling Rigs Now Ready to Pound Their Way Into The Oil Sands

Warm Springs—Wyoming

Already one of the big producing fields of Wyoming. Right wells have been completed and fortunate stockholders are drawing big dividends every month in the year. This is a "shallow" field and the drilling cost is a minimum. Through a peculiar turn of fortune the Van Duzen Co. was able to secure a valuable lease on this strike. At least a dozen companies are now drilling towards the oil producing sands in the Warm Springs Dome and we do not expect to lose much time in starting our operations there. Remember this is a producing field.

Sundance-Upton Fields—Wyoming

We were in this field before the boom started and have 6,080 acres under lease on the very apex of the structure. This dome bids fair to be one of the best fields in Wyoming and our large acreage will always make us the big company of this field. We have one rig spotted in this field.

Salt Creek—Wyoming

This is the most consistent oil producing field in all the world, and although the field is but five years old, it has made more wealthy people than any of the big fields of Wyoming. The wide-awake men who are at the head of this company have secured 320 acres of land less than a half mile from one of the largest gushers in the field. One 500 barrel well in this field at $1.00 per barrel would mean more than 20 per cent per annum on the total capitalization of the Van Duzen Oil Co. We have room for 64 wells on this property.

The Crazy Woman's Pocket-Montana

This dome has been recognized by many geologists to be the most "perfect structure" for an oil reservoir in all of America. Two other companies have wells in the process of completion on this dome and it is reported that one of them has already encountered an oil producing sand. The Van Duzen Oil Co. has secured 500 acres of divided land lying midway between the two wells now drilling. Our derrick is now in the course of construction. When this field is proven it will be the first producing field in Montana. Boom prices will prevail and our stock is sure to go sky high.

Powder River Junction—Wyoming

We have a one-third "benton" interest in three one-quarter sections lying within a quarter of a mile from a well now being drilled by the famous "Olin Oil Co." This dome is looked upon as being one of the coming fields of the state. Shallow drilling and its proximity to rail transportation will make this field a big dividend payer.
